Concerning the developments which are to be looked for in the near future with reference to the dam, he

"Next month Arthur P. Davis, di tion service, will submit a prelimi nary report on the findings surveying and investigating which has been devoting its attention to the Boulder Canyon damsite dur ing the last few months. This part has discovered that there is a real bedrock at Boulder Canyon and that a dam of 700 feet from bedrock to top is feasible. This means a dam of from 550 to 600 feet in height above the ground, which will not only provide water to irrigate about 3,000,000 acres of land is Arizona, California, Nevada and Lower California, but will take away forever the desperate need of agriculturists in the lower basin of the Colorado river for flood control—a need which has been the most insistent force behind the movement for a dam at any of the tenta-tive sites which have been under con-who in turn will present it to con-gress for consideration. With this done there will come what is 'e'leved to be the most 'mportant difficulty to be faced and upon the right settlement of which the success of the en-tire project depends. This is the ad-judication of the claims of the va rious states which are interested in

of each of the Colorado rive and the fear in those state them from the use of the river when their o rrigation and power problems a ready for solution. And while th

ast allegation is met by the proved fact that there is water enough and to space in the Colorado i e for a state and for all p p difficulties are so num r

Colorado members ha e bee appointed by all the states in the eague with the exeption of California.

Propose National Commission Now, with these two commissions organized and functioning, it is proposed that there be created a national commission, headed perhaps by for-mer President William Howard Taft, and including the foremost civil and constructing engineers, lawyers and economists in the United States, which would be unblased and free from sectional prejudices, and which would, with the engineering and river commissions, decide authoritively the conflicting claims of the states interested in the river. This is the mos pressing need in the building of the dam, and it is one which must be met before any other work can be thought

"These problems disposed of, what will the Boulder Canyor dam mean? It will mean that more than 26,000.-000 acre feet of water will be im-pounded, or a quantity equal to a two-year flow of the Colorado river. It will form a lake of from 12,000 to 14,000 square miles of water surface with an average depth of 350 feet. It will provide a tourist center of such importance that the Salt Lake railroad is considering already the build ing of steamers to ply upon the lake in connection with the hotels which also are inder consideration. It will make a sportsman's paradise such as the United States has not yet seen. But above all these things, and overshadowing them completely, is the fact that it will irrigate 3,000,000 acres of the finest land in the world and prove an efficient control of a river now a continual menace.

Wealth Of Energy "With regard to the power possi-bilities of the dam, it is estimated that not less than 1,000,000 horsepower of electrical energy may be created by it—energy which not only will be used by the industries and communiby it—energy which not only will be used by the industries and communities of the states affected, but will primarily result in the still further devel pment of agricultural areas through being used to lift water to sections which could not be irrigated directly from the dam. These considerations and therefore will be assessed for its construction, thus making the government a partner in the enterprise.

"Free the dam may be built by sections which cannot be concerned with sectional demands or disputes, is strictly in favor of a just apportionment of the waters.

"Naturally, the question of how the dam is to be financed is to be considered, and which group themselves into the following three classifications:

"First, the dam may be built by sections which cannot be introduced in the enterprise."

Kruckman will remain in Phoenix today and perhaps tomorrow. He passed through the Salt River Valley about a week ago in company with Robert H. Lyman, one of the editors of the New York Herald, with which Kruckman formerly was connected. Through what Lyman saw of the Salt River Valley and the Roosevelt dam during this trip, and through the visual experience he had of the importance of the irrigating systems of the Buolder Canyon project, according to Kruckman, and has pledged his support to the building of what is the first step in the development of the entire Colorado river—the greatest experienced approach to the enterprise." Claims to Be Adjusted
